Renata: (12:01) Thanks ICANN staff and everyone we have a few more minutes on our call

Kathy Kleiman: (12:01) I can hear Carlos

Renata: (12:02) Go on

Kimberly Anastácio: (12:03) I'm Kimberly Anastácio and I work for Coding Rights, a female-lead think-and-do-tank designed to foster human rights through technology. I joined NCUC this year because I am quite interested in ICANN issues (for ex, my master's thesis is a comparative analysis on ccTLDs operators in LATAM). What I'd like to know better is how civil society entities and/or individuals engaged in CS organizations already integrated in spaces like the IGF etc might be welcomed in NCUC. Many individuals that work for civil society groups could help ICANN in many ways I guess. I am just having a hard time finding a way to integrate this traditional activism in ICANN (of course, respecting the scope of the organization that I know is quite different from other IG arenas).

Renata: (12:04) Kim this is a great question thanks

Renata: (12:05) I am guessing this is a good question for the onboarding team to answer but Farell and Carlos want to prepare an answer too that would be great

Ayden Férdeline: (12:05) Hi Carlos, I think we have this already with the Policy Committee calls once per month. However we do not have translation on these calls. Might be an idea worth taking forward with our leadership?

Carlos Vera NCUC Ecuador: (12:07) thank you Renata and Ayden of course all options are welcomed

Kathy Kleiman: (12:07) @Kimberly: thank you for responding and sharing! You are right that involvement in ICANN is a little different than traditional activism. Your background in Coding Rights could be immensely valuable to ICANN and important policy issues. Happy to talk further! I'm at kathy@kathykleiman.com

Carlos Vera NCUC Ecuador: (12:10) hope to have some answers or comments cveraq@gmail.com

Yazid AKANHO: (12:10) very interesting members meeting.
